

Near By Open Air Markets

<http://www.tuscanyitaly.info/marketdaysintuscany/marketdaysintuscany.htm>

Hours 8am-12pm

The market is usually set up in the main piazza or parking lots in the form of stalls and trucks displaying the goods. In some cases, the stalls actually belong to shops in the same town who are offering the same stock or sometimes a larger and/or cheaper stock than in their shop. The majority of the stall-holders make their living going from market to market, which is, of course, why the market days are different in different towns. In general, the prices and quality are good, and there are bargains to be had. These weekly markets in Tuscany are in no sense oriented towards tourists so that the Chinese products commonly offered at, for example, San Lorenzo market in Florence is absent. Some of the fruit, vegetables and sometimes meat are produced by the stall-holder and in other cases are bought at a wholesale market. In both cases, the products might be somewhat fresher than in a supermarket but prices will not necessarily be cheaper. Often the fishmonger comes on a different day from the general market.
